JOHN BORN

John Born started Humble Matter in 2014 after escaping from the world of advertising—thanks to his amazing wife. Not a New York native, but definitely a transplant who’s taken hold, John has lived in Brooklyn since moving to New York in 1993. An avid runner and beach lover, John can be found running throughout Brooklyn or relaxing on the beaches of Truro, MA with his family when he’s not in the studio. John has a BFA from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He is extremely thankful for the gift that is Humble Matter. Humble Matter pieces use a vocabulary of repeated shapes in an attempt to create archetypal forms that feel like an inevitable part of this continuum.

Humble Matter is based out of Wedge Ceramics, a membership studio and wonderful community of ceramicists located on the reassuringly rough-and-tumble border between Clinton Hill and the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Humble Matter is powered by the talent, dedication, patience and good humor of John’s fellow makers Stephanie Gandelman, Beatrice Field and Rebecca Hsu.
